

M.T.A. Staff Recommends Bus Lines Into Torrance

The extension of bus service south on Crenshaw and Hawthorne boulevards to Torrance, a general regrouping of other lines throughout the South Bay and Centinela Valley areas, establishment of a uniform token or 25-cent minimum fare, and the expansion of transfer privileges was recommended today by the Metropolitan Transit Authority's engineering staff.

The new service on Crenshaw and Hawthorne Boulevards provides for the extension of the Crenshaw-Vine Street Line 85 from Crenshaw Boulevard and Manchester Avenue, 3 miles south to Crenshaw and El Segundo Boulevards, and for the extension of the Hawthorne-Inglewood-Los Angeles Line 5 from Hawthorne Boulevard and Broadway, in Hawthorne, 3.4 miles south to Hawthorne Boulevard and Artesia Street (South Bay Shopping Center).

TRANSFERS

The new transfer privilege recommendations provide for persons traveling on lines of the former Cross Town system—now a part of the MTA—to transfer to MTA lines in the South Bay and Centinela Valley areas.

The new program also provides for the establishment of the regular MTA basic token or 25-cent fare schedule on all lines of the former Cross Town system in the area in order to implement the transfer privileges, which eliminates the payment of duplicate fares.

The extension of service along Crenshaw and Hawthorne Boulevards and the granting of transfer privileges and elimination of duplicate fares are among improvements that have been requested of the MTA by residents and civic groups in the South Bay and Centinela Valley areas.

A public hearing on the recommendations will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday, August 1, at the Transit Authority Building, 1060 South Broadway, Los Angeles.

The engineering staff's recommendations, if approved by the Authority, will become effective September 10.

The major improvement on the Hawthorne line in the South Bay and Centinela Valley areas provide for:

Hawthorne-Inglewood Los Angeles Line 5 Extended from Hawthorne Boulevard and Broadway, in Hawthorne, 3.4 miles south to Hawthorne Boulevard and Artesia Street (South Bay Shopping Center).

Extension of direct Freeway Flyer service to downtown Los Angeles along Hawthorne Boulevard from Artesia Street.
